PERTINENT PROJECTS

Enhancing the Human Wellbeing Vital Signs through Inclusive Engagement, Present

Lead (PI), DFWCS, Oregon State University

Social scientist working in close collaboration with the Asia Pacific Cultural Center and Empowering People in Communities (two nonprofits based in Tacoma, WA) on a community-based participatory research project focused in engaging Asian American, Pacific Islander, Black, and African American residents in the Puget Sound region in order to gauge their human wellbeing as it relates to the natural environment, address current environmental injustices associated with ecosystem recovery monitoring and planning, and inform broader ecosystem recovery efforts. Funded by the Puget Sound Partnership.

Nature-Based Integration among Oregon's Slavic Immigrant Community, 2020-Present

Lead (PI), DFWCS, Oregon State University

Social scientist working in collaboration with the Immigrant and Refugee Community Organization's Slavic and Eastern European Center on a project focused on nature-based integration (NBI) and understanding the facilitating role of environmental recreation (e.g., fishing, hunting, and hiking), stewardship, and education to foster integration among Oregon's Slavic community. Work includes: collaborative grant application development and submission; NBI program development, evaluation, and analysis; NBI community research (e.g., survey and analysis); technical guidance and education; and results dissemination through publications and presentations. Funded by Mazamas.

Sense of Place and Baltic Sea/side Interactions in Coastal Estonia, 2020-Present

Lead (PI), DFWCS, Oregon State University

Social scientist working in collaboration with Dr. Anu Printsman of the Centre for Landscape and Culture at Tallinn University on a project focused on coastal change (e.g., climate change, coastal development, and infrastructure installation) and its impacts on Estonian residents' senses of place of the Baltic Sea and coastal counties' shorelines. Project partly focuses on minority community (e.g., Russian-speakers) variations in coastal connections and interactions. Work includes: collaborative grant application development and submission; research, fieldwork, and analysis; and results dissemination through publications and presentations. Funded by the Association for the Advancement of Baltic Studies. Funding pending from Tallinn University.

Social Science for the Salish Sea (S4), 2018-Present

Collaborator and Co-Author, EarthLab, University of Washington

Partnered with regional social scientists and practitioners to identify social science priorities for Salish Sea recovery efforts, including wellbeing, health, and equity. Assisted with discussions, prioritization survey, and report review. Supervised intern (2020-2021) focused on fleshing out top priorities for future research and will co-advise future PhD student (2022-2025) on climate change and wellbeing project. Currently co-lead author on peer-reviewed publication (in process, 2021). Funded by the Puget Sound Partnership and Oregon State University.

Salish Sea Survey, 2018-2019

Lead, SeaDoc Society, University of California Davis

Lead social scientist assisting with the development, implementation, and analysis of a long-term replicable Washington-British Columbia survey focused on place names, place meanings, and geographic literacy. Funded by SeaDoc Society, University of California, Davis.

Social Science Integration into Ecosystem Recovery, 2021-Present, 2017-2020 (Postdoc)

Co-Lead (Co-PI, starting 2021) and Research Associate, DFWCS, Oregon State University and Puget Sound Partnership (WA state agency)

Social scientist working on multiple collaborative projects focused on human wellbeing integration into local and regional ecosystem recovery in the Puget Sound region (WA). Embedded social science lead at the Puget Sound Partnership. Projects emphasize human wellbeing, equity, and social science (e.g., methods, data, analyses, literature, and content) integration within environmental management (e.g., planning and decision-making among local watershed groups and regional (state) environmental planners). Work includes: research, analysis, including community-based participatory research; project coordination and monthly/quarterly progress reporting; social science advising and integration within planning; technical training and integrating human wellbeing and decision-making tools (e.g., social science data, EPA decision-analysis tools, and Structured Decision Making) into planning; report and peer-reviewed publication writing; and graduate student mentoring. Funded by the Environmental Protection Agency (two awards 2017-2021; one award 2021-2025).

Shoreline Armoring and Sense of Place Interactions in Puget Sound, 2017-2021

Lead, Department of Fisheries and Wildlife, Oregon State University

Designed and implemented a research project aimed at understanding the interactions among shorelines, shoreline armor (e.g., seawalls), sense of place, and coastal behaviors. Launched a 12-county survey, 4-county intercept cognitive mapping activity, 1-county co-created survey (Island County), and co-coordination of interdisciplinary nearshore summit to understand how communities feel, think, engage, value, and prioritize shorelines, including how areas contribute to their wellbeing. Worked with the state and local partners on project development and policy/planning alignment. Will continue to collaborate with key partners on final publications and presentation. Funded by the Human Dimensions Lab (Oregon State University), The Center for Pacific Northwest Studies at Western Washington University, the Applied Geography Specialty Group of the American Association of Geographers, American Association of Geographers, and Puget Sound Ecosystem Monitoring Program.

Addressing Community Needs with the Kickapoo Tribe in Kansas, 2016-2017

Researcher and Evaluator, Center for Public Partnerships & Research, University of Kansas

Researcher and evaluator working in collaboration with tribal governments and communities to assess and address local needs, policies, and programs. Primarily worked with the Kickapoo Tribe in Kansas focusing on a wide range of topics, including: mental health, physical wellness, early childhood development, smoking cessation, local food systems, community development, and sense of place. Work included: evaluation, research, and analysis; project coordination and collaboration; utilizing historical trauma-informed and community-based participatory approaches; collaborative archival research; grant writing; and federal report writing. Supervised undergraduate research assistant. Funded by the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services.

Place-based Policy Problems in Portland, Oregon, 2016

Fellow and Lead, Center for Public Service, Portland State University

Researcher on a collaborative project focused on identifying and prioritizing place-based policy problems in Portland, Oregon. Assisted with the development of an interdisciplinary literature review on homelessness, housing affordability, traffic congestion, and demographic growth.

Water Rights in Detroit, Michigan, 2015-2016

Research Intern, Center for the Study of Citizenship, Wayne State University

Researcher on a collaborative project focused on public policy, citizenship, water rights, and racial equity in Detroit. Assisted with the development of an interdisciplinary literature review on water rights and collected water shutoff data for future analysis. Also assisted with 2016 Citizenship Studies Conference organization and implementation. Partly funded by Wayne State University.

Civic Capacity and Friends Groups for the Willamette Falls Legacy Project, 2014

Fellow and Lead, Metro (Regional Government)

Fellow focused on projects examining community-based natural resource management (Willamette Falls), civic capacity, equity, and civic engagement. Work conducted in collaboration with Metro (Nature and Parks), Oregon City, Oregon State Parks, and Confederated Tribes of Grand Ronde, among other partners. Work included: evaluation, research, and analysis for two overlapping projects (civic capacity assessment and friends group analysis); stakeholder partnership building; project coordination; outreach; and information dissemination. Work also included the development of a guide to form a friends group (public-private nonprofit) and to coordinate the group's development (now Willamette Falls Trust) which took place in 2014. Funded by Metro, Center for Public Service at Portland State University, and the State of Oregon.

Citizenship and Sense of Place in Estonia, 2011-2016, 2018-Present

Lead (doctoral project, continues but with limitations), Department of Geography and Atmospheric Science, University of Kansas

Designed and implemented research looking at citizenship and sense of place among minority Estonian Russian-speaking community in two Estonian regions. Project included multi-language and area studies training, on-the-ground fieldwork, community-based participatory research techniques, cognitive mapping, semi-structured interviews, and surveys. Project has been extended into a modified longitudinal study focused on the City of Narva, Estonia. Funded by the U.S. Department of Education and University of Kansas (Center for Russian, East European & Eurasian Studies) (FLAS Fellow), Institute for Policy & Social Research at the University of Kansas (Fellow), and The Hall Center for the Humanities at the University of Kansas.
